

QUESTIONS

1. Of whom is the absolute will, and who decides everything?
Daniel 4:34-37; Revelation 4:10-11
2. Would our will be God's will even if "we believe ourselves" to be in his path and in righteousness?
Isaiah 55:8-9; Job 34:9
3. Why don't we accept God's will? And, we want other things?
James 4:1-3; Romans 9:16-21
4. What do we need to be able to accept the will of God?
1 Peter 5:6-7; Isaiah 66:2
5. Do we like what God decides or does? But, what do we see here?
1 Samuel 3:16-18; 2 Samuel 15:24-26; Luke 22:42
6. According to the previous questions, which must be our attitude before God?
James 4:13-15; Luke 22:42
7. What would be the only thing, while walking in his path, that would be our will according to that of the Eternal, and that it is done as such?
Matthew 18:14; John 6:38-40

COMMENTARY

We get to be on this path, going on and placing our trust in God. This makes us ask him and hope that God will listen to us and do as we ask, but we find a problem with this. Would that be the will of God? We have seen through other lessons that our will can not be hand in hand with that of God. The will of the Eternal is supreme, and as such, is before everything.

We could very well beg, ask, implore, be in fasting and prayer to find grace before Him, we feel ourselves correct and righteous, and even then, it does not happen as we want. Then we must not distrust, but rather, accept the will of God.

If we ask God to have his will be done (Matthew 6:10) and we ask Him that his will become our wish, then we can accept his will.

Let us ask the Lord for that so important virtue to accept his will, and then, we will be acceptable before Him, and we will accept his will.
