COMMENTARY

Dictionaries define will in the following manner: "it is a power of the soul that moves us to do, or not do, certain or any thing. It is also defined as free will, determination, determined intent, or wanting to do, or that others do such, or which thing.

What is true is that in many occasions we are willing to do or want others to do something in particular, be it at work, the house, or at church, but for reasons we do not comprehend, that which we thought was best, was more convenient, was not done for X cause. This means that on occasions, my will is not necessarily the will of God.

Let us ask the Lord to teach us to always go along with his will, whatever this may be.
