COMMENTARY

---

In Biblical History there are many forms of understanding that the seventh day of the week is the day of rest, for the God that commanded it so that it be observed. As being He, the author of that day of rest and being the maximum authority in space and in the universe, so he will it, and who may contradict it and tell him why did he make this day of rest? Why not any other day? There must be no one that says that, but throughout history we see that man does not like what God made and created. Man has changed that day for others so to not submit to his creator and prefers to submit to the commandments of men.
